Brooklyn, New York – March 16, 2017 – Acme Smoked Fish Corporation, a family-owned and operated producer of premium smoked seafood specialties, is proud to have recently earned the BRC audit's highest AA rating for its New York factory effective January, 2017. This trails the same coveted ranking for its North Carolina factory in July, 2016. The BRC Global Standard, first published in 1998, is the gold standard for food and food ingredient manufacturing, processing, and packing.

Acme Smoked Fish Corp. is nationally recognized for its long-standing tradition of elevated quality and food safety standards. The company, together with its suppliers, maintains processes and procedures that consistently exceed benchmarks in the industry.

Built by experts and incorporating the most rigorous auditor training and examinations, The BRC Global Standard outlines detailed framework on ways in which product safety, integrity, legality, and quality along with operational controls are managed. The consumer protection organization standardizes criteria around the world, with its framework now in use by suppliers in more than 130 countries.

"We're honored to receive the esteemed AA rating from BRC," explained David Caslow, Co-CEO and fourth generation family owner. "We're equally grateful for our employees' commitment and dedication, without which this would not have been possible.
