Acme Smoked Fish Corp. Achieves 4-Star BAP Certification

Brooklyn, New York – November 29, 2017 – Acme Smoked Fish Corp., a Brooklyn purveyor of smoked fish and fourth-generation family-owned business, is pleased to announce that it is now capable of supplying BAP four-star certified Smoked Atlantic Salmon products. This unique capability is only possible by having full control of the entire manufacturing process in the United States and at the salmon source in Chile, through its Acme Chile operation.

The Best Aquaculture Practices (BAP) program is the world’s most comprehensive third-party certification in responsible aquaculture. The BAP program is also the first recognized by the Global Food Safety Initiative (GFSI) and the Global Sustainable Seafood Initiative (GSSI). BAP certification exemplifies Acme’s continued commitment to the health of marine ecosystems, to the environment, and to social integrity.

Its four-star system signifies integration levels of certification along the aquaculture production chain. Seafood earning the four-star mark meets the highest standards in responsible and sustainable aquaculture at each point across the entire chain, from hatcheries to feed mill through farm and processing plant.

“We are proud to offer our customers four-star BAP-certified smoked salmon,” explained Adam Caslow, Co-CEO and fourth generation family owner. “This is an important step in minimizing the impact of our actions on the environment by working closely with our seafood suppliers in ways that help to protect the land, water, and delicate ecosystems.”
